RESUME FOR PARLOR GIRL

Search was resumed today for Miss Eleanor Arlin, twenty-two, the missing Colerbrook, N. H., girl, who disappeared from her boarding place on Barton street, Brookline, January 8. Her friends fear she has committed suicide.

Automobiles were pressed into the search and all the hospitals and morgues visited. Abduction is one of the possibilities considered.

She left $20 in her room, her mother and her brother-in-law, Dr. W. J. Rogers, of No. 174 Harvard street, Brookline, continued today their quest for some clue as to the girl's whereabouts.

Mrs. Edmund A. Rogers, a doctor's wife of No. 174 Harvard street, Brookline, is a cousin of the missing Miss Arlin. Mrs. Rogers said:

"Miss Arlin roomed at a dormitory at No. 174 Harvard street, where she had lived for two years, the cousin originally from Colerbrook, N. H., and is the daughter of Mrs. Jane Arlin, a widow of that place."

"She was employed at the Horace K. Turner Art Studios at Newton center. She left her boarding place at 11 a. m. to go to the mail box. We waited a few days before we notified the police, hoping to hear some word from her."

"The authorities have been working on the case for the last two weeks and have been unsuccessful. I discover one additional fact. The Miss Arlin is a suicide. She was rather melancholy over her work and seemed dependent at times."

"My brother-in-law, Dr. Rogers, formerly secretary to Police Commissioner O'Meara, but now first assistant to the United States District Attorney here, was notified about the case, and everything was done to locate Miss Arlin."

Blithe Robbie Burns! we love thee well,

Because thou wert so like thyself!

And in full cups, with festive cheer,

NOTED GERMAN BAKER FAVORS REGIONAL LAW

Regional bakers were strongly endorsed by Professor Paul Hensler, president of the Central District Bank of Berlin and one of the most noted bakers of Germany, upon his arrival today in this city, as the guest of Edward A. Flinn.

"Your new law creating regional bakers is a great step forward," he said. "It means substantial betterments for finance and industry, it frees from politics and political influences."

"It would be almost a good thing, but it will always spoil business," he said.

"When I want to build a house I am in an arduous, and later, more competent mechanics to do the work."

GADSKI SCORES A COMPLETE WAGNER OPERA

By FREDERICK JOHNS.
"Die Meistersinger von Nürnberg," a comic opera by Richard Wagner, was sung for the first time by the Boston Opera Company last night. Of course it had been given many times in Boston by the Metropolitan and other visiting companies during the past forty years.

It was in no sense a novelty. On the other hand it marks the steady advance of the Boston Opera Company to a great institution capable of giving the most difficult and wonderful music dramas in the world in a manner to compare favorably with the German Opera House, and even the Metropolitan.

Andre Caplet has been rehearsing this production since long before the opening of the season. Desk by desk, part by part, he proceeded, until he was ready to put everything together, and produce a perfect whole. It was a tedious, very expensive process, but one which is amply justified by the result.

It differs greatly from its immediate predecessor, "Tristan and Isolde." Without relaxing from his stern orchestration, Wagner wrote into this work melodies which should be easily recognized.

STORY OF THE OPERA.
The story deals with the guild devoted to poetry and singing called the Meistersingers. Its members were bachelors of Nuremberg, ranging from shamblers to the highest aristocracy. Its rules of admission were strict and pedantic. Such an organization actually existed in Nuremberg, in the sixteenth century.

Walter, a Franconian knight, loves Klov, whose father, Pogner, declares she must marry a Meistersinger. Walter wishes to qualify and in the first act is tested by the committee in the Church of St. Catherine. Walter's song, though very pretty, violates many of the rules of composition as laid down by the bachelors and candlestick makers and he is refused admission.

In the second act Beckmesser, Walter's rival, comes to Nuremberg. He is a white-haired miserably interloper who sings a song in the town square at his bench on the opposite side of the street. He is a clown, under which Walter and Eva try to elope, but are stopped by Beckmesser, who advises them to wait.

In the third act Walter appears full of joy because he has dreamed a wonderful song. Beckmesser tries to sing Walter's song and fails. Walter then arises and sings it properly. He is elected by acclamation to the Meistersingers and wins a bride.

GADSKI GLORIOUS EVA.
Carl Jara last night sang Walter. Jara is a tenor who should not easily such a purely lyric role. His voice is not beautiful, and his method too labored to be pleasant. Dramatically he is satisfactory enough.

John Gaddis is a glorious Eva. The beauty and freshness of this woman's voice is truly marvellous. A satisfactory of the old gods and goddesses of opera, she remains with the rest have passed away. She is a great singer and a splendid actress. Lucie Blumenthal is rather busy in the contralto part and her voice lacks sufficient volume to be impressive. Still she plays the role of the old nurse of Eva with much humor.

Symphony Presents Pleasing Program

Debussy, Tchaikowsky and Liszt were upon the Symphony program yesterday. Debussy's suite symphonique "Printemps" not to be confused with his Rondo Printemps, was performed for the first time. It was composed at Rome in 1887, before the present Debussy style had been acquired. Its effect is pleasant. It is a pretty piece. Liszt's vigorous "Hungarian" tone poem was welcome and thoroughly enjoyed.
